

Design director Francesca Amfitheatrof anticipates a brilliant fall with new interpretations of Tiffany Victoria™, Tiffany Bow and Tiffany Infinity. In reimagining these signature collections, she brings out the strengths of each, sculpting them in metals of harmonious colors highlighted with diamonds, creating jewelry that is as beautiful worn delicately alone or in dazzling multiples.

“This is jewelry that can be worn day and night,” Amfitheatrof says. “The designs are fluid and elegant, working together or on their own to create a spectacular diamond look.”

Introduced in 1998, Tiffany Victoria™, a graphic floral pattern of marquise diamonds, is inspired by a diamond corsage ornament that was a centerpiece of Tiffany’s exhibit at the 1889 Paris World’s Fair. The new collection evolves with round and pear-shaped diamonds. Matched for color and clarity, the diamonds are set in platinum pendants, bracelets and earrings that radiate with the light and energy of the brightest stars in the sky.

Tiffany Bow recalls the slender thread one might tie around a finger to remember something—or someone—with whom one shares a close bond. Eighteen karat rose and white gold form asymmetrical loops and off-center knots on slender chokers, curvaceous cuffs traced with diamonds and delicate, sparkling rings.

Tiffany Infinity symbolizes the continuous connection, energy and vitality of an ancient symbol. Amfitheatrof goes minimal with this balanced form, refining its contours in cuffs and rings of sterling silver, as well as 18 karat gold and diamonds with fluid modern style.
